Through The Mill

Ten and one-half months out of the 15 in 1938 were spent in Fort Saskatchewan jail by a young Edmonton woman who again made her appearance at police court Friday.

Out of the lockup only a few days ago, she was in court on the same charge of condition Thursday night on a city street.

"Your term in jail don't seem to have done you much good," said the court.

"I would be all right if they would give me a chance," said the accused, "but every time I get out they 'vag' me and put me in jail again."

"Next time you come out of jail you had better find some way to do and stay out of town," concluded the court. "You are fined $40 and costs or two months."

Whether or not a man and his wife who appeared in court on a charge of begging are trying to gain the reputation of being Edmonton's youngest couple, they nevertheless are becoming known as just that.

Walking with her husband on the corner of Crowfoot street, the woman keeps the eagle eye on her spouse, and if his glance as much as hints at a fleeting instant on a pretty face she takes him to task, a hitting right and left, and all the while shouting and swearing at him.

What makes the strangeness of the scene is that the husband offers no resistance to the hitting and tongue lashing.

When a citizen complained to a policeman on Jasper avenue that the woman was disturbing him, she was taken to the station, and some money, the policeman arrested them and charged them with begging.

Both were ordered kept under mental observation, the man at Olds, the woman at Fort Saskatchewan, until Feb. 24.

RIST ESTATE APPEAL HEARD IN HIGH COURT

Submission that Mrs. Kate Rist, Edmonton, was not entitled to make application for relief under section two of the Widows Relief Act because she was not in a position, under a separation order agreement, to receive less under her husband's will than she would have made if her husband had died intestate, was made by Ronald Marland, counsel for the Thomas Rist estate, Thursday.

The appeal was made against decision of Mr. Justice W. R. Howland in awarding Mrs. Rist $40 weekly from the estate.

Under separation agreement Mrs. Rist was given $6,000, and she also retained the right to live in the family home. Mrs. Marland contended that this cash settlement exceeded the widow's share of the $60,000 estate if Rist had died intestate.

The trial judge held Mrs. Rist could not contend herself as to the widow's share of the estate, but Mr. Marland quoted authorities to support the contention that a widow could not claim her share of the estate if she was not in a position to receive less under her husband's will than she would have made if her husband had died intestate.

Mr. Marland contended that the appeal was barred by the statute, benefits conferred by an act of parliament, the Inheritance Proceedings Act.

The judge is proceeding.

COMPETITION IN LIVESTOCK URGENT NEED

Ponoka Cattleman Tells Conference Legislative Aid Required

Creation of a competitive livestock market is the urgent need of Canada, L. J. Austin, manager of the Ponoka Livestock Co-operative Association, told the Thursday afternoon session of the livestock marketing conference at the Macdonald.

"Your crying need," he said, "is for a competitive livestock market. Unfortunately today our livestock marketing system has become a competitive one, and the only way to get out of it is to create a competitive market."

"I believe our problem of livestock marketing is in large part a legislative problem. In fact I do not believe we will ever get very far without legislative help, and this must be accompanied by the urging activities of not only a few leaders but through the entire cooperation of all livestock producers."

"I believe that if some satisfactory solution is found, it will be in the form of a legislative act which the livestock from our farms and ranches could be put in a position in which buyers would not be able to get their supplies as they have come to be accustomed to bargain for these supplies as they would have generally a great deal of choice."

"Farmers generally would be more inclined to co-operate together, and the women of their stock, since they know that this basis had been used by Mr. Austin declared."

NO SYSTEM

"Today's tendency is the exact opposite. Our livestock is marketed in the most unsatisfactory manner imaginable. Farmers put their livestock in the hands of professional drovers who are in constant touch with varying market conditions."

"Trucks which leads to livestock to the packers' back doors and selling for the packers, take whatever they are offered."

"When a farmer is asked to sell his livestock, he is told to sell it at whatever price he can get, and he is told to sell it at whatever price he can get, and he is told to sell it at whatever price he can get."

"The result is that the farmer is left with a loss, and the packer is left with a profit, and the consumer is left with a high price for his meat."

20 TINS FOOD DESTROYED IN HEALTH MOVE

Inspectors Make a Close Check After Woman Reports Illness

City health board inspectors in the past week have condemned 20 tins of foods after making a thorough inspection of all stores in the city, it was learned Friday

The special inspection was made when a city woman and her small daughter were painfully ill for a few hours after eating infected food from a tin.

Housewives and others are warned by Dr. Little to be cautious in eating tinned food. They should look carefully at all tins and, if the contained food is infected, a slight bloating or bulge in the tin is nearly always noticeable.

If there is no bulge, the housewife should listen carefully when she first punctures the tin to open it. A slight hissing of escaping gas will indicate infection.

nearly every food store in the city and in some cases examined every tin of food in the store. They found only 20 tins which needed to be confiscated, Dr. Little said.

92 WARSHIPS TO ASSEMBLE AT GIBRALTAR

Home and Mediterranean Fleets Start Manoeuvres Wednesday

LONDON, Feb. 17.—Ninety-two warships of the home and Mediterranean fleets of the Royal Navy are assembling at the eastern side of the Gibraltar gateway for manoeuvres starting next Wednesday in conjunction with the Mediterranean war fleet of some 50 French craft.

Diplomatic quarters said the combined naval forces would keep an eye out for any Italian moves against Tunisia and Corsica, French Mediterranean possessions, against which the Italian press and public have advanced claims.

COMBINATION FLEETS

The combination of the British home and Mediterranean fleets for manoeuvres on the eastern side of the Gibraltar gateway of the Mediterranean appeared to represent a new manifestation of the British policy of defence collaboration with France.

The spring manoeuvres of the British fleet were held in the Atlantic side of Gibraltar in the last two years.

REMAIN IN SIGHT

Except for two battleships and four submarines from the French Atlantic fleet, France's Mediterranean fleet was those of the Mediterranean fleet. They remained in sight only sailing to the Gibraltar, between that British base and Gran, Algeria.

The French fleet was expected to continue until March 15, when the bulk of the fleet is expected to be assembled at Brest. The admiral said the British Mediterranean fleet would continue to March 15, except for a three-day interval to be spent at Gibraltar.

Early Day For Meeting Asked By Market Body

WINNIPEG, Feb. 17.—The Dominion government has been asked to fix an early date for a meeting of delegates from the prairie market conference committee to meet at Brandon, Manitoba, announced Thursday. The meeting will be held to discuss proposed revision to western agriculture.

Mr. Bracken said the delegates would ask officials at Ottawa to carry out the program outlined at the committee meeting on the west coast this week. The program provided continuation of a wheat loan for 1938-39, and a price of at least 80 cents a bushel for No. 1 Northern, based for the 1938-39 wheat crop.

Italy Admits Bombing Of Minorea Feb. 18

ROME, Feb. 17.—The Giornale d'Italia Thursday frankly stated the Italian air force had bombed Italian Minorea, on Feb. 18, while the British destroyer Decatur was in the harbor, functioning as a neutral ground for fighters leading to the surrender of the island by the Spanish government to the insurgents.

The paper revealed this fact to credit for surrender of Minorea to the British, but to the British as arranged it, but to the Italian army. He came up in the nick of time when it seemed that all was lost.

Hertzog's Son Favors Racial Recognition

Prime Minister Rejects Theories Fostered By Own Kin

PRETORIA, Feb. 17.—A move by his own son for introduction of racial political doctrines in South Africa is causing uneasiness in the minds of Prime Minister J. H. van der Westhuizen. Mr. Hertzog's son, who is a member of the House of Representatives, has been advocating racial recognition for his United Party government.

The premier has "completely rejected" a suggested basis of racial unity proposed by his son, Dr. Albert Hertzog, and a group of young "intellectuals" who have obtained acceptance for their views among the Nationalist group of disaffected Boers.

General Hertzog, confederated with his own program of Africanization, has declared:

"Under no circumstances will I give an assurance that I will ever lend my support in politics to people who are not prepared to recognize and accept the principle of complete equality and equal treatment of both the African and English-speaking sections on the basis laid down in the program of principles of the United Party."
